Preface

I gratefully acknowledge the hospitality of the people of Uma Bawang. Both laypeople and religious specialists spent much time in teaching me their religion. I am particularly grateful for the contributions of Avun Ngo, Avun Imang, Bulan Ngo, and Uku Hlong.

Many people made my research possible between 1970 and 1974. I am grateful to the late Edmund Leach for his advice and support, and to the personnel of the Sarawak Museum, especially Lucas Chin. Jayl Langub, then Sarawak Administrative Officer in Belaga, helped me in many ways and provided me with hospitality during my monthly visits to the bazaar. The late Tom Harrison gave me his Central Borneo archives, which contain several interesting documents, in particular Baling Avun's precious manuscript on Kayan religion, to which I refer in the text.

Rodney Needham and Bernard Sellato made invaluable suggestions on previous versions. The manuscript has benefited greatly from Madeleine Palmer's editorial comments; I am also grateful for Kathleen Hugessen's and David Pearson's comments on sections of the text.

Fieldwork was carried out with financial support from the Canada Council (1969-1973, 1974) and the Evans Fund in Cambridge (1970, 1971). A small grant from McGill University (1987) helped me complete the manuscript. Colour slides were processed into black-and-white prints with financial help from the Evans Fund (1990).
